Big Smile For Photographer [Photo]

Baby Weldon Edward Randall

Happily unconscious of the tragic events surrounding his birth, Baby Weldon Edward Randall musters a big smile for the photographer on his arrival with his great-aunt, Miss Amelia Hohnhaus, from Oakland, Calif. The child was taken to the home of his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. William Hohnhaus, 2817 South [word cut off] Street, where Miss Hohnhaus, [words cut off] became the baby's foster mother [words cut off] operation while his mother, Elsie Hohnhaus Randall, lay dying in an Oakland hospital about three months ago, the victim of her estranged husband's wrath. Horation (Ray) Randall, the father, shot his young bride after an argument over expenses of the baby's impending birth. He is serving a life sentence for murder in a California prison. WINTER STAGES RETURN ENGAGEMENT

The calendar says spring is here but winter staged a return engagement today. The mercury started to drop Wednesday evening after a fairly heavy rain yesterday. This morning it snowed for some time and ice and snow covered the streets and roads. Most of the snow disappeared today, however.

Indications are that the cold snap will remain until late Friday or Saturday, when the mercury is to rise.
