

COUPLET COMPS TO THE FACULTY

By Ruskin Swan.

Mr. Cockrum, principal, detector of all crime,
Drop a penny on the floor, he'll find you every time.

—o—

Miss Tichenor says, "With a slight difference this proposition is the same."
We on investigation find the difference more than in the name.

—o—

Miss Bates is our poet, with flaming red hair.
Her motto is "semi-blonds pay but half fare."

—o—

Miss McLellan is so quiet and small,
'Tis a wonder that she has been noticed at all.

—o—

At the end of the hall is Miss Duncan so thin,
Who looks at you fiercely until you see her grin.

—o—

Miss Saupert will be thought of when we go to make our dates,
For she has pounded History into our unwilling pates.

—o—

Miss Hancock's rare construction tests
The pupils find as tiring pests.

—o—

Miss O'Brian is an actress who would please the god of Mars,
"The Other Woman," "The Eternal Triangle," are the roles in which she stars.

—o—

Miss McClasky teaches us the proper way to speak,
Despite her efforts, our attempts are usually very weak.

—o—

Mr. Hammond is the master of the hammer, saw and nails,
If a Freshman hits his finger, how does teacher stop his wails?

—o—

Miss Danks teaches girls to cook, to sweep and how to sew,
So when they leave school, marry off, house-keeping is no foe.

—o—

The landscape sketch Miss Lowry makes with practiced eye,
But such results does she obtain, she heaves a mournful sigh.

—o—

Miss Mossman teaches us our notes, the naturals, sharps and flats,
The manner of the melody of overtures of cats.

—o—

Mrs. Brodhecker give us but half of her hours,
The rest of her time pots and dishes she scours.

—o—

Taken all in all, they might be better or they might be worse,
But since we've done our best with them, time finds us ready to disperse.
