

Robert and His Gum

Robert had a piece of gum,
He found it in the snow .
Everywhere that Robert went
The gum was sure to go.

It followed him to school one day,
It was against the rule.
The teacher, Miss Bates, took it then
And chewed it after school.

ECHOES FROM THE CLASS ROOM

Rosa Morton: George Washington had quite a reputation in the Spanish-American war.

Jesse Campbell: The Swiss-Irish lived there.

Miss O'Brian: She wore a soft man's silk shirt.

Youthful debater in elementary speaking class: The day of universal peace has not come.

Helen Hussey: The importance of good teeth is that you do not have such diseases and it gives a better appearance to strangers.

Pupil in Literary Class: Chaucer's greatest work was the "Cranberry Tales."

A History Pupil: Christianity was introduced into England by Rome in 55 B. C.

An English Pupil: King Alfred found learning dead and survived it.

In English Class: A post-mortem examination is an examination after you've flunked.

Thanks to the feminine members of the faculty we have received an abundance of bits from the life of J. F. Hammond.

A hair lip is a deformity, a wooden leg is a misfortune, but side whiskers are a man's own fault.—Homer Kister.

Miss Bates to Donald Shewmaker, who, in the assembly, is reading "The Red Headed League:"

"Are you thinking of joining this league?"

Donald: "Yes, you and me, both."

Charles Ballard: "I threw a kiss to Bertha Morgan last period."

Raymond Dill: "What did she say?"

Charles Ballard: "She said I was the laziest fellow she ever saw."

Leland Trippett was reported to have been knocked crazy in the Evansville football game, and declared that he was going to drop Latin. He wasn't crazy.

In general science.

Mr. Cockrum: "Now, around Jupiter there are seven moons. Just think of it, girls, seven moons!"

In public speaking.

Miss McClasky to Fred Kerr: "What part of speech is strike?"

Fred Kerr: "O, I know. It is present tense."

White Lumber Co.

BOTH PHONES—22

Quality Mill Work

PRINCETON, INDIANA

Build With Wood

THE HOME OF QUALITY