

The Pleasant Hill Diary

Annotated by David Youse

The "Pleasant Hill Diary", so called because of its references to the Pleasant Hill church, was an unsigned daily diary now known to have been written by John T. Byerly, describing daily events in his life from 1885 through 1917.

The Diary, in itself, stands alone as a historical document. Although it contains genealogically interesting information, it does, however, fall short as a genealogical reference. Because of that, I have taken the liberty of making several informational additions to it, without altering the original. The additions I made are all from personal, published or accessible Wayne and Henry County records.

The Pleasant Hill church was located at the north-east corner of the intersection of Symonds Creek and Goose Heaven Roads, in western Wayne County, Indiana near the Henry County line. The church itself is long gone but, interestingly, the foundation is still there, although filled in. Because of that, that particular corner can not be plowed or planted and has been left bare. The Cemetery is still there, about 100 yards due east, now on private property but now overgrown and in deplorable condition.

Pleasant Hill Church - cir. 1941

I would appreciate hearing from anyone who has comments on my annotations. Any additions, clarifications or corrections are welcome. I have taken a personal interest in this project because many of the people mentioned in the diary are my ancestors and relatives. The people and events recorded here are mostly in Henry and Wayne Counties, with a scattering of other outside areas.

I have noted several instances where the dates of events in the Diary differ from dates on official county records. It is apparent to me that the dates on the county records are often simply mis-recorded or are actually the dates when the record was recorded or certified. It is much more likely that the Diary dates are correct.

The diarist apparently spelled many names the way they sounded, or perhaps the way others spelled them. My annotations use the spellings found on county records, newspapers or on tombstones. Neither way is more “correct” than the other. It did, however, make it far more difficult to locate the correct data in alphabetic listings.

The case against Nathaniel S. Bates, who was hanged in Richmond. This was an atrocious murder. In the morning of the day on which Bates killed his wife he was seen to sharpen his pocket knife while in the country. He then went to the house where his wife was and while they were alone he committed the deed. After doing it, he appeared on the streets and told what he had done. He was at once arrested, afterward indicted and put on trial. The trial commenced on May 5, 1886, and lasted four days. The jury found him guilty and inflicted the death penalty. The court sentenced him to be hanged on Aug. 26, following, which was done. Bates went upon the witness stand and, while testifying in answer to questions, said that when he went into the house he struck his wife with an axe handle and knocked her down; then took her by the hair, dragged her head upon his knee, and cut her throat with his pocket knife. He further answered that in doing so he believed he was guilty of murder in the first degree and deserved death.
