

Snipped from the Biography of FLESHER, Adam Wesley

Adam and Elizabeth (HARFORD) FLESHER left their home there and with their two small children, John and Granville, came to Indiana and located on a tract of land in what later came to be organized as Jefferson township, Jay county. That was in 1835, the year before Jay county attained a separate civic identity, and the country in which the FLESHER's settled then was practically a woodland wilderness. Adam FLESHER, who was a Virginian by birth entered, from the Government a tract of 240 acres in Jefferson township and created there an excellent farm, his home being in section 21. He and his wife spent the remainder of their lives there. They had five children who grew to maturity, John, Granville, who took over the old home place, and three daughters, Mrs. Susanna JOHNSON, Mrs. Eliza GILBERT and Mrs. Elizabeth MERANDA.

Milton T. Jay, M.D., History of Jay County Indiana, Historical Publishing Co., Indianapolis. 1922, Vol. II

Transcribed by: Eloine Chesnut