ALBERTSON

PORTLAND, Nov. 10 - Russell Albertson, 48, a farmer living in the northwest part of Jay county, east of Montpelier, was found dead last night in a corn field on his farm. Death was evidently caused by a heart attack while he was shucking corn.

When he failed to return for supper, relatives went to the field and discovered the body. It was removed to a mortuary at Hartford City, pending the completion of funeral arrangements. He is survived by the widow and two children.
