

ROLLIN COLLINS FAMILY

Source: Saturday Evening Journal March 5, 1881

Rollin Collins and family, formerly of Gravelly Run, were crossing a bridge about a mile west of Thorntown last Saturday, and as they were nearly across, the horse frightened and commenced backing. There being no railing on the bridge, the buggy was backed off and fell the distance of fifteen feet. Mr. Collins jumped to the bridge, but his two daughters and grandchildren fell. The children were badly though not fatally injured. The horse was also badly hurt and the buggy demolished. The only wonder is that any escaped. - thanks to Kim H

The website management appreciates all the contributions provided for use here.