

HAMPTON - LEEKE

Source: Crawfordsville Weekly Journal, 20 February 1892

A Sunday Diversion. The home of Mrs. Hampton was the scene of quite a little misunderstanding Sunday which resulted in officer Huffman being called in to arbitrate in the name of the red-eyed law. Mr. Leeke is a worthy farmer who while in town puts up with Mrs. Hampton as a boarder and, as that lady declares, "always pays his board." Well, good Mr Leeke was there yesterday when in come Lon Hampton. Lon was in a pugnacious mood and seemed to question the right of his mother's boarder to be about the house. He finally grew so demonstrative that Mr. Leeke took refuge in the bed room and locked the door to save himself from rough treatment, and maybe the loss of his ears. The whole tribe were weeping copiously when the police arrived and went away with Leeke and Alonzo. Mrs. Hampton has probably lost a worthy and high priced boarder. - kbz
