

LADOGA INJURIES

WILLIAM MANGUS - falls from tree

Source: Scrapbook of Chester Peffley of Ladoga, Indiana 1890-1916 (probably took place late July in 1915 according to the dates and happenings in the scrapbook in this section - kbz)

William Mangus, 70 years of age, fell from a tree while picking cherries at his home a short distance west of Whitesville last Monday, was severely bruised and was rendered unconscious. His wife went to assist him and finally succeeded in getting him out of the lot in which were some hogs which she feared might injure her husband if he were left alone. She then called help. Mr. Mangus soon rallied and it is believed he will recover.

The website management appreciates all the contributions provided for use here.