

JOHN H. SMITH - hips mashed

Source: Crawfordsville Daly Journal 16 April 1915 p 7

John H. Smith, Kentucky Avenue, is confined to his bed with severe injuries sustained while working at the shale pits of the Crawfordsville Shale Brick factory this week. Smith was working between two shale cars when the cars came together, crushing his hips and rendering his legs useless. He was taken to his home and Dr. H.W. Sigmond was called. The man has been in a serious condition and has been hardly able to move in his bed. Today his condition was regarded as slightly improved. He will probably be confined to his bed for several days. -- typed by kbz
