

FRANK STOUT SHOT WHILE SHINGLING

Source: Weekly Argus News May 27, 1899

Frank Stout, while shingling a roof in the vicinity of the fair grounds one day last week was struck in the breast by a mysterious missile and seriously injured. It is supposed to have been a bullet from a target gun but no report was heard whence it came is unknown. Dr. Ensminger probed for the ball but failed to locate it. The wound is an ugly and exceedingly painful one.
